Ray Parker: English Language Teaching Consultant

Ray has been involved in English Language Teaching since graduating in Hispanic Studies in the late 60's. The bulk of his time is now devoted to teacher education and training teacher trainers. He has taught, trained and examined teachers in 34 countries and co-authored a well-known teachers' textbook on the phonology and pronunciation of English and a course book published in Italy. In his career he has been teacher, Director of Studies, College Principal, Senior Lecturer, Director of Language Examinations, Inspector of English Language Schools and consultant. His focus now lies with teacher training and ELT project management with a particular interest in in-service professional development for non-native English speaking teachers and in the development of confidence about English Language systems in native speaker teachers. Recent years have seen him helping to manage and deliver major teacher training initiatives in Africa and Asia.

Ray's plenary contribution to "Aspire to Inspire"

Ray will do his best to reveal the secret of successful English language pronunciation learning and teaching! The good news is that this is not technical or complicated. He will quickly establish with you the typical components of an English language pronunciation syllabus and then discuss with you the order in which we might want to teach these elements and the relative priorities that they deserve.

He will then go on to clarify the important connection in English between grammar and pronunciation with a particular focus on the grammatically determined role of stress in normal speech.

This will lead to a consideration of some of the differences between a stress-timed language like English and a syllable-timed language like Italian.

He'll go on to discuss and, if possible demonstrate some teaching techniques and awareness raising procedures which can usefully be integrated into everyday lessons.

In summary, he will be describing a simple but neglected aspect of the pronunciation of English which will have long-term benefits for learners and future users of English both in terms of their pronunciation but also - as an important bonus - improving their listening confidence.

Romina Tappi: Educo Artistic Director

Romina has been the Artistic Director of TEATRINO for the last 17 years and a Teacher Trainer for just as long. As a graduate of the School of Creative Arts, Wollongong University (Australia) her training and skill set has been put to good use, working both behind the scenes and centre stage under the spot light. Born in Italy but growing up in Australia, Romina brings a bilingual conversion of culture to the mix, with a work history in theatre, tv, radio, music performance and drama teaching. During her time in Italy, she's written 10 variations of popular fairytales with original scores and songs, not to mention hundreds of theatrical sketches, workshops and didactic materials for actors, tutors and teachers. She's trained thousands of facilitators including; tutors and camp directors for English summer camps; actors from around the globe for T.I.E. tours; teachers of English in various countries from all scholastic levels. She's been invited to speak at numerous ESL conferences over the years and has been directly involved in both European and International projects with Italian students and teachers. Aspire to Inspire has always been her motto!

Teaching English Through Drama & Play

Theatre In Education - A POWERFUL TEACHING TOOL

EDUCO's methodology follows the theories (and results) of many accredited linguists and classroom practitioners. This workshop will explore these theories using scripts, songs and drama based language activities, with emotions as the engine and drama techniques as the vehicle.

Using Educo's holistic approach to learning, TEATRINO has for many years entertained and motivated students through T.I.E. TEATRINO puts into practice the theory that second language teaching should focus on encouraging 'natural' acquisition and providing input that emotionally stimulates the learner. The experience is memorable because the students are emotionally involved and having fun! With TEATRINO students acquire the linguistic skills they need for communication without realizing they are learning.

Drama is a learning medium rooted in a child's experience of play and has a fundamental and valid place as a powerful ESL teaching tool. Educational practices and developments are definitely a 'work in progress', so lose your inhibitions, have fun, and Aspire to Inspire!
